Over 60 years' experience in commercial waste disposal and recycling

Turning Waste Into Opportunity

Get ahead this autumn with smarter waste management solutions from Parry & Evans

Welcome!

As autumn arrives and businesses prepare for a busy end to the year, it's the perfect time to take stock of your waste management strategy. Increased deliveries, seasonal demand and growing packaging volumes all present an opportunity to improve efficiency, reduce costs and maximise the value of your recyclable materials.

The waste and recycling industry continues to evolve, with significant changes on the horizon. From Making Waste Digital, including the introduction of the Digital Waste Tracking Service, to changes surrounding Green List waste charges, businesses face an increasingly complex regulatory landscape. Staying informed and working with the right waste management partner has never been more important.

Inside this edition, you'll find the latest industry updates, customer success stories, fleet news and practical recycling advice to help your business stay ahead throughout the autumn and beyond.

Thank you for your continued support. We look forward to helping your business reduce costs, improve recycling performance and navigate the changing waste and recycling landscape with confidence.

Digital Waste Tracking and Making Waste Digital: What Businesses Need to Know

The waste and recycling sector is becoming increasingly digital, with a growing focus on transparency, traceability, and accurate reporting.

From 1st October 2026, Digital Waste Tracking will become mandatory for licensed or permitted waste receiving sites in England and Wales. As part of the Making Waste Digital programme, these sites will need to report controlled waste they receive through the official Report Receipt of Waste service.

For the majority of commercial customers, collections, containers, and everyday recycling services will continue as normal. However, the new requirements represent an important step towards a more accountable and data-driven waste industry.

What Does This Mean for Parry & Evans Customers?

For Parry & Evans customers, collections and services continue as normal.

Digital Waste Tracking does not mean customers need to change how they book collections, use their waste containers or manage their everyday recycling services.

Much of the information required for digital reporting is already captured through our existing systems and processes. The main change will be how that information is formally reported through the new system.

We are already preparing for the October 2026 deadline by reviewing our processes, updating systems where necessary, and ensuring our teams understand the new requirements.

Our priority is to make the transition as seamless as possible without disrupting the reliable waste and recycling services our customers depend on.

Staff Spotlight:

Lea Campbell: Sales Support & Project Manager

Lea plays a key role in supporting both our customers and our team, helping to ensure every project runs smoothly from initial enquiry through to completion. Working closely with customers, suppliers and colleagues, she coordinates day-to-day operations, manages projects and provides dedicated sales support.

Her commitment to building strong customer relationships and keeping everything running seamlessly makes her an invaluable part of the Parry & Evans team.

Q: What does your role involve day-to-day?

I'm responsible for qualifying and allocating all incoming sales enquiries, whether they come in by phone, email or online. My job is to make sure every enquiry is captured accurately and directed to the right person quickly, so customers get the information and support they need without delay.

Q: What part of your role has the biggest impact on customers?

Definitely the reporting. I prepare weekly and month-end customer reports, along with bespoke and ad-hoc reporting when clients need more detailed insight. These reports help customers understand their recycling performance, track volumes and make informed decisions about their waste management.

Q: What do you enjoy most about your role?

I love the mix of structure and problem solving. Every day is different, but there's always a clear purpose: helping customers, supporting the team and keeping everything moving smoothly.

A Sustainable Partnership: Abakhan and Parry & Evans

Bringing commercial waste management under one roof.

With multiple waste streams to manage at its Mostyn headquarters, family-run retailer Abakhan wanted a simpler, more efficient approach to waste management.

Parry & Evans delivered a tailored solution, combining cardboard, wood, general waste and mixed recycling collections under one trusted local provider. With dedicated containers, flexible collections and a single point of contact, Abakhan has streamlined its waste handling, reduced administration and improved recycling compliance.

Did You Know..?

Parry & Evans can recycle a wide range of commercial plastics, including LDPE, HDPE, PET, PP, polystyrene (PS) and EPS.

'Tis the Season: Cardboard

Fleet Highlights from Parry & Evans

At Parry & Evans, we're continually investing in our fleet to deliver a safer, faster and more reliable service for our customers.

The latest addition to our Deeside operation, the Linde H40, is built to handle the demands of a busy recycling facility. With a lifting capacity of 4 tonnes, it enables our team to move heavy bales of cardboard, plastics and other recyclable materials quickly and efficiently, helping to keep collections, processing and dispatch running smoothly.

Its precision handling, compact design and advanced load control mean greater productivity on site, allowing us to process more material and provide the responsive service our customers rely on.

Every investment we make is an investment in better service: helping your business recycle more efficiently, reduce downtime and keep valuable materials moving.

Autumn is when cardboard volumes really start to climb. Is your business ready?

As businesses gear up for the busiest time of the year, deliveries become more frequent, stock levels increase, and mountains of cardboard can quickly take over valuable workspace.

The good news? Cardboard isn't just waste, it's actually one of your most valuable recyclable materials.

When it's kept clean, dry and separated correctly, cardboard can be recycled into new packaging time and time again. With the right collection schedule and waste management plan, your business can reduce disposal costs, improve recycling rates and even unlock rebate opportunities.

Don't let overflowing cardboard slow your business down this autumn!

Parry & Evans provides tailored cardboard recycling solutions, flexible collections and Total Waste Management services to keep your business running efficiently, regardless of how busy the season gets.

Get ahead of the seasonal rush. Speak to our team today and let's build a recycling solution that works for your business.
